
Global Style: Alanna Smit Design

FEBRUARY 29, 2016 | 2 Comments

Recently, I took my family to Australia. I fell in love with the cool, coastal culture of Sydney and north to Byron Bay. More and more, I find myself drawn to style influencers from Australia in fashion and interiors. It's inspired me to start a new series, highlighting designers, fashion curators and creative juntices from around the globe. Today, I'm starting the series with Alanna Smit, an interior designer from Sydney with a beautiful eye for fresh design with a collected, curated feel. Take a peek into some of the inspiring work of Alanna Smit Design.

I love the use of black, white and organic elements throughout her spaces. This mix creates a modern foundation, softened with rustic and vintage accents. Her spaces are filled with interest and a beachy vibe.

The wall of black cabinetry and rich wood floors give this open space polish. I like the rattan furniture and lighting, that add texture to the kitchen and dining area.

This bathroom has a rich, timeless feel to it. Old and new are mixed for a classic look.

I love how the wallpaper in this space gives it a hint of tropical glamour. A beautiful example of a refined and modern, coastal bathroom.

A beautiful, crisp wall of blue and white tile makes a fresh statement in this powder room. A new take on nautical style.
